Post Angkor Ascension 2012 Interview

Grandmother Robin Youngblood Tekwelus

What was the most significant part of the Angkor Wat experience for you personally?

Realising that I've had many past lives. I've been a Shaman to Kings, a consultant, a peasant, and a Priest. Each experience was deeply spiritual. My connection remains strong and the circle is complete.

How do you feel that experience affected the group, the local community and do you feel it did in fact have a global and universal effect?

I saw many changes and transformations in the group. I experienced deep connection with many of the Cambodian people and saw personal transformation in the lives of our guide in our connection and talks and his participation in our ceremonies. As to the world well, when the Buddhist Monks chanted away all the old negativity we all felt and saw a lifting and transmutation of those old energies. We were linked with many groups across the universe who were also holding ceremony and prayer at the same time. The vortex at Angkor Wat connecting with the Ley Lines and other Vortexes and Ley Lines across the universe, anchored in a deeper energy of love, harmony and balance that has been experienced on earth in untold millennia. I felt this very deeply as as we talked among the group we all experienced the deep sense of connection throughout the universe.

After your experiences, what does the future hold for you? Does it change the way you view yourself/humanity/ your responsibility as a light worker?

My experience at Angkor Wat has even more deeply embedded in me the purpose and mission for which I live for. When my elders told me at Sundance that I was to begin traveling and sharing our teachings for the evolution of humanity, in this time of great energetic shift, which was foretold in our indigenous prophecies, I realized that my entire life's training has been for this moment and beyond. I've always believed that we are one part connected through the greater consciousness of the universe and that we are fully capable of receiving the love energy that's being streamed into consciousness now and acting from the core of love rather than the fear based mentality of previous times. My Kuleana (responsibilities) is only increased as I continue to journey to open heart of love amongst all beings.

Apart from a great spiritual impact this experience had are there any emotional mental and physical experiences you would like to share?

The last day we were in Cambodia I read on Yahoo about the school shootings in America and I was reading those at the same time I hear a child screaming up the road from our hotel. The child was very ill and had sores all over her body, I have no idea what was wrong with her. Her mother had tried to put medicine on her but I hurt the child very badly. My heart had been so filled with love and now it was emptied with grief, I saw in a deeper way than ever before the duality in our world. I saw how often we distract ourselves with cell phones and comp games, going to the mall because we want to deny the disparities in our lives. Denial and distraction only allow the cycle to continue. Kali is the Goddess of creation and destruction. When we honour her, by connecting to the grief within us all,; sharing that grief by looking into each others eyes; allowing that grief to penetrate us deeply, we will no longer be able to continue to be able to constituent the cycle of war and violence. I truly understand that part of my mission is to assist us all to understand our connection with All Our Relations, to honour the grief within and to make our decisions with love for the next 7 Generations and beyond.

What can you suggest people can do for their part in helping today and for the future?

I'll tell you what my elders told me:

When I asked that question a big wind came through the Sundance ground and blew all the tepees down and a double rainbow appeared. They said chaos precedes the miracle this is a time of chaos but its alright because the double rainbow came to tell us we will bridge the gap between fear and love. They said – let everything go that is not in your true alignment follow your path go deep inside and discover your destiny. Then allow it emerge and carry you where it will.
